In 1982, conflicting amendments to certain sections of Public Act 3 of 1939 were attempted by three different means; voter-initiated legislation, legislation drafted and adopted by the Legislature but voluntarily submitted to a referendum, and legislation drafted and enacted by the Legislature without a referendum.

On May 26, 1982, an initiative petition proposing amendments to these sections was filed with the secretary of state. On July 22, the initiative petition was certified and transmitted to the Legislature; the Legislature did not adopt the proposed law within the 40-session day period established by Article 2, § 9, so it became a ballot proposal, designated as Proposal D.

On July 3, after the initiative petition was filed but before it was certified and transmitted to the Legislature, Public Act 212 of 1982, amending the same sections of the same statutue, was approved by the governor. Public Act 212 was voluntarily submitted to a referendum by the Legislature, under Article 4, § 34 of the Constitution. On the ballot, it was designated as Proposal H.

On October 13, Public Act 304 of 1982 was approved by the governor, also amending these same sections. Having received the requisite two-thirds vote in both chambers, this act became immediately effective.

At the November 1982 general election, both Proposals D and H were approved. Proposal H received 1,670,381 votes in favor of approving the public act submitted to a referendum by the Legislature, and Proposal D received 1,472,442 votes in favor of approving the initiated law. By its terms, Proposal H took effect once it was approved by the voters; the result of the election was certified on November 22, at which time Proposal H became effective. As an initiated law, Proposal D became effective 10 days later, on December 3, pursuant to Article 2, § 9.

Suit was filed seeking a declaratory judgment as to which of the two conflicting ballot proposals would become effective. At the request of the governor, the Michigan Supreme Court asked the lower court to certify the controlling questions directly to the Michigan Supreme Court. Once the questions were certified, the Court also asked the parties for briefing on the effect of Public Act 304, the bill signed into law by the governor that was not submitted to the voters.

by the governor that was not submitted to the voters.

Regarding the conflict between Proposals D and H, the Court recognized that there was no conflict-resolution provision in the Constitution providing which measure is to prevail if a conflicting initiated law and legislation voluntarily submitted to a referendum by the Legislature are both approved by the voters at the same election. In re Proposals D & H, 417 Mich 409, 424 (1983), To determine which proposal would become effective, the Court "borrowed" language from Article 2, § 9, on initiatives and referenda, which states: "If two or more measures approved by the electors at the same election conflict, that receiving the highest affirmative vote shall prevail." Const 1963, art 2, § 9. Since Proposal H received the highest affirmative vote, the Court held that Proposal P prevailed in its entirety over Proposal D. In re Proposals D & H, 417 Mich at 424-25. The Court also held that Proposal D did not "impliedly repeal[] Proposal H by virtue of Proposal D's later effective date," because "[i]t is the date of enactment, rather than the effective date, that is dispositive." Id. at 426.

The Court also considered the effect of Public Act 304 on Proposal H. Public Act 304 was passed by the Legislature and signed by the governor in October, while Public Act 212 was signed in July. However, Public Act 212 was not enacted until November, when Proposal H was approved by the voters. Thus, the Court held that Proposal H was enacted later than Public Act 304, meaning it was not repealed by the enactment of Public Act 304. Id. at 426.

Before the November 1982 election, the secretary of state asked the attorney general whether this initiative petition proposed a law within the meaning of Const 1963, art 2, § 9. In an unpublished letter opinion dated September 1, 1982, the attorney general noted that, while the people had the power to initiate resolutions under the Constitution of 1908, the power of the initiative was restricted to laws under the Constitution of 1963. The attorney general concluded that, because the petition purported to propose "legislation" and to impose a duty on two legislative officers, it proposed a law, in substantial compliance with Const 1963, art 2, § 9.

² Public Act 6 of 1967 was subjected to a referendum by citizen petition in 1968, which it survived. This initiated law repealed that public act.

³ Compiled as MCL 445.571 et seq.

⁴ Compiled as MCL 791.233 and 791.233b.
